Answer 3

The economic impact of the Non-Cooperation Movement disrupted British colonial trade substantially through the following developments:

1. Boycott of Foreign Goods

Foreign products were boycotted nationwide. Liquor shops were picketed, and foreign cloth was publicly burnt in large bonfires as a sign of protest.

2. Halving of Cloth Imports

Between 1921 and 1922, the import of foreign cloth was reduced by half, with its total value plunging from ₹102 crore to ₹57 crore.

3. Merchant Boycott and Refusal to Finance

Indian merchants and traders actively supported the movement by refusing to deal in foreign goods or finance foreign trade.

4. Adoption of Swadeshi Clothing

As the boycott spread, the public discarded imported garments and made a collective switch to wearing only Indian clothes.

5. Growth of Indian Textiles and Khadi

The increased demand directly boosted output in Indian textile mills and handlooms, making the production and wearing of Khadi widely popular.

Answer 4

Indian merchants and business magnates actively aligned with the Civil Disobedience Movement due to specific economic motivations and through concrete forms of support:

1. Business Interests & Colonial Discontent: During the First World War, Indian merchants and industrialists had made huge profits and become powerful. Keen on expanding their business, they now reacted against colonial policies that restricted business activities.

2. Economic Demands: They wanted protection against imports of foreign goods, and a rupee-sterling foreign exchange ratio that would discourage imports.

3. Organized Representation: To organise business interests, they formed the Indian Industrial and Commercial Congress in 1920 and the Federation of the Indian Chamber of Commerce and Industries (FICCI) in 1927. Led by prominent industrialists like Purshottamdas Thakurdas and G. D. Birla, the industrialists attacked colonial control over the Indian economy, and supported the Civil Disobedience Movement when it was first launched.

4. Direct Support & Boycott:

They gave financial assistance and refused to buy or sell imported goods. Most businessmen came to see swaraj as a time when colonial restrictions on business would no longer exist and trade and industry would flourish without constraints.

5. Declining Enthusiasm: But after the failure of the Round Table Conference, business groups were no longer uniformly enthusiastic. They were apprehensive of the spread of militant activities, and worried about prolonged disruption of business, as well as of the growing influence of socialism amongst the younger members of the Congress.
